

United Church to Hold Annual Meet

Rev. Peter Dawson, minister of the local United Church announces that the annual meeting of the Champion United Church will be held on Sunday Feb. 5th. All members are urged to keep this date in mind and make a special effort to be present.

Two months ago E. Selland, local dairyman, discovered that milk tickets to the value of $20 were missing. At the time of his discovery he was not certain whether the tickets were stolen or lost. Due to the fact that he had several hundred dollars worth of tickets on hand, it was impossible with him to avoid the missing tickets being used. In consequence he continued with his tickets but stamped his name on them in cross-cross style. Two months passed with no word of the missing tickets. Wednesday of last week the missing tickets turned up on the seat of his car which had been parked on the main street. The mystery continues but Mr. Selland has the tickets.

The mild weather continues and old timers are discussing the prospect of a winter such as never experienced before. The cold weather Christmas week was the only real spell of winter this season. It has been ideal for outdoor skating and the absence of chinooks, with the exception of two, has enabled the ice to hold marvellously well. Stock men rejoicing and only hoping that February and March will be as kind as the last month.

Police Court

Court Shows Leniency

Two years with hard labour in Lethbridge Jail less one day was the sentence imposed upon Gordon Kelley McLean, local young man who pleaded guilty to 25 charges in connection with the Village of Champion and the Consolidated School district Magistrate Beaumont of Carmangay sat on the Bench while A. B. Hogg of Lethbridge conducted the case for the Crown. Mr. McLean was ably represented by Max Makavitch of Lethbridge.

Following plea of guilty on 13 charges with respect to the school and 12 charges in connection with the Village, defence counsel made a plea for suspended sentence. Four residents of the district were called to testify to the splendid previous record of the youth and support the plea for leniency. The Crown however pointed out the seriousness of the case because of its public nature.

In passing sentence His Worship stated that he had made the sentence light because of the special circumstances.

It is intimated that a petition to the Honourable the Minister of Justice may be made for parole of the accused.

Hockey fans given plenty of excitement

Hockey fans were given plenty of excitement on Sunday when two games were played on Champion ice and in both instances the visiting teams went home with victory in the bag.

In the senior game, which was refereed by Alex Latiff the score was 7 to 3 and in the pee-wee, which was handled by J. Anderson the score was 2 to 1.

The games were not as one-sided as the score might indicate, the teams being well matched, but the visitors appeared to have better combination play and had the breaks as far as scoring.

The next schedule game will be played at Carmangay on Sunday Jan. 29.

Anglicans to Hold Annual Meeting

Anglicans of Champion are to hold their annual meeting on Sunday Feb. 26th according to a decision reached on Sunday. Originally planned for Sunday Jan. 22nd it was decided to adjourn until the later date at which time a larger representation would be present.

"Got fire fighting equipment?"

"Plenty."

"Yeh—and dynamite. Been bringing up a lot of Indians from around Tack's lake—they know their business. Ought to be set enough fires down in that region so they can get out of putting them out."

They were at quite an altitude, but still in fog.

"This smoke goes up plenty high," Hammond said. Even as he mentioned it, he became aware that the air had cleared, that he was breathing deeply for the first time that day. The ranger leaned closer.

"No smoke; clouds," he shouted. "The visibility's hell. Getting colder—freezes-up probably."

"Hm?"

"The forester grimaced. No one hoped that more than he. Then:

"Know any place we could get up here, to start cutting on this blaze? If we can back-draw down below and cut 'er off here, it'll save a half billion feet of timber." That was the job now, to save timber. But in saving it, Hammond knew, lives must be risked, perhaps lives given.

He pointed toward Whoppee.

"We can work through the mist," he said. "The fire missed that. The smoke raised for a few minutes, and I got a look. It's clear."

Thus the grueling task began, air-planes which banked and skimmed the surface of the lake, which took desperate chances, which dropped recklessly downward through the smoke pall to discharge their cargoes, then took off as desperately with no clear knowledge of shore or tree-top line.

Flashing white and slashing Indians stopped off the pontoons to splash ashore and then stand waiting until other chance-taking pilots, Timmy Moon among them, should bring up the long line of smaller, more lightly-sworn boats, the collapsible tanks and portable pumps which would allow water to be sent down through the forest. Boxes of dynamite were unloaded. Sacks were carried out by the bale.

Hour after hour, into the deep night and again to daylight, the dogged task continued with short respite for a shift or two. The changed, dynamite boom and trees crashed to earth. Long, ragged lines of men, gasping for clean air, waving wet sacs monotonously, attacked the smoldering earth.

The air grew hotter, more horrible, but suddenly Hammond paused in his communions and looked up, blinking. He put out his hand, swiftly retrieving it, close to his eyes.

"Snow!" he shouted. "I started to snow. Keep going fellows! We've got help from upstairs!"

An outcry from the gang joined his call. Snow? Now the flakes were thicker and the wind was freshening, with the peculiar wet chill of approaching freeze-up. A thrill went through Hammond, as quickly, however, to change to apprehension.

There was a possibility of fatality here, this. If a gale should quit, believing a blizzard imminent, and it should prove only a flurry, then the grueling labor of 48 hours would be lost. Jack started on a circuit of his workers.

The hose gang were still at it, the manpower pumps going faithfully, piling the water by easy stages from the lake into canvas cisterns, there to be pumped out again to more tanks and finally to the reaches of the fire. Here a sack crew worked diligently, the gangs of axmen, their faces muffled in wet cloths, walked amid smoldering embers, that they might feel breasted flames and bring an end to the menace of tree-top explosions. But at last he sighted a group of idle men at forest once had run to the river's edge here; now it was scarred and blackened. Logs still smoked, thickening of the snowfall. Certainly there was no place to relax lakes.

"What's wrong with you?" he shouted. "This fire isn't over!"

A Tackia Indian turned and with a short arm gesture motioned him closer. Then a white man called:

"Better come down here."

Hammond obeyed, staring at what he saw. On the ground was the charred body of a man, his clothing burned away.

"Dead?" Hammond asked. There was a queer tremble of his voice.

"That's the hell of it," a firefighter answered. "The poor devil's still living."

The victim lay face downward, distorted mouth open. Hammond went to his knees and gently turned the man on his back.

"I thought so," he said jerkily. It was Bruce Kenning.

Burned, horribly so, the man still was recognizable. Hammond reached for his gloves and dusted the dirt out of the man's eyes; they were unharmed. The eyes moved, in a manner which Jack had to watch.

There was no sound, but even an action of the lips. They were too swollen, too cracked; long fissures in the hugely enlarged flesh gave forth roars of steam. The enlarged tongue, pressed lightly motionless against seared palate, told the story.

"Some of you fellows strip off your coats and cut some poles," he commanded. "Make a stretcher and take him out to the lake. I'll get him back to camp in the plane."

High in the air, Hammond heard over the man, relaying in his hate. It seemed cruel that Kenning went down to his life. There was not the alleviation of being able to groan; he made no sound save a throaty sort of gurgling. Only his eyes, fervent, terribly expressive, told of his suffering.

The airplane dropped down through the soapy sky to a comparatively gentle landing. Hammond opened the cabin door and leaned out over the spray of the pontoons, as the plane tilted to shore.

The life rafts were beached, empty. Men, and a few women, were tugging possessions out of the shadows, and moving with them through the driving snow, which steadily became heavier, toward the blackened expanse that once had been Sapphire. Already a few tents were rising. Life had begun anew.

A woman called out to Hammond.

"Hey! What's the trouble?"

It was around the World Annie, in charcoal mud and streaks. Her boots were muddy.

"Got a burnt man in the cabin," he answered.

"Thought so. No use stopping here, Tack around to the inlet. They're using my place."

Jack started.

"But I've got a burnt man."

"Alert there plenty up there like him?" yelled Annie. "What's the matter on you? Who've you got?"

"Bruce Kenning. He's in bad shape."

Annie turned, and with a hooked arm, halted a passing man.

"Go tell that Joyce guy they've found 'Shen's been runnin' around this camp for nuts."

And a quietly efficient woman of the Frontier Nursing Association, one of a dozen down in within the last 24 hours, was directing the efforts of the women as they began the long task of cleansing and oiling and bandaging.

A door slammed. Hammond turned. For an instant he looked into the eyes of Kay Joyce.

"There he is," the man said, quietly.

Finds New Land

Lincoln Ellsworth Claimed Antarctic Territory For United States

Lincoln Ellsworth, leader of a fourth Antarctic expedition, said in a dispatch to New York from the motor ship Wright that he had discovered a new land in the North American Newspaper Alliance that "80,000 square miles of country never seen before by human eye has been added to the known area of the world's surface."

Ellsworth said he had claimed the area for the United States.

He told how he flew south from the fringe of the Antarctic to a point "from where I could see to Lat. 74.30 S. from my position on Long 79 E. and I could see at least 150 miles on each side of the plane."

He said that "although I never reached the area I saw in my flight of discovery might in some years hence become more free and disclose rich mineral deposits for, on the coast, exposed surfaces show much evidence of mineralization."

Two Canadians are aviators for the Ellsworth expedition. They are J. H. Lyburner and T. R. Trevis.

The Real Moral Force

Church Is Only Hope For Free World's Freedom States Einstein

Christian Century, Jan. 13, 1938, says: Albert Einstein, exponent of the theory of relativity, having looked first to the universities, then to the press and, finally, to individual writers of Germany to defend freedom in modern life, now finds his hope in the church. "I never had any special interest in the church before," he says. "Now I feel a great affection and admiration because the church alone has had the courage and persistence to stand for intellectual truth and moral freedom. I am forced to confess that what I once despised I now praise unreservedly."

Advice Of Scientists

Give Larynx Rest By Talking Only When Necessary

Keep your mouth shut, except when talking is necessary. If you want to avoid harm to your voice box. So advised two physicians, Dr. Chevalier Jackson and C. L. Jackson, of Philadelphia, in the magazine Hygiene. They pointed out that constant chatter gives the larynx no rest. They warned, too, that shouting, cheering, forceful singing and loud speaking often cause little hemorrhages in the voice box. These may develop into various kinds of tumors.

Moral Is Obvious

Five of seven children belonging to a Glace Bay, C.B., family were taken ill with a severe type of diphtheria. The other two were unaffected. Why? Because they were recently the only members of the family to attend a toilet clinic. The moral of the story ought to be obvious to parents in general.

According to careful observers, four-fifths of the conversation among the lower classes in China deals with the subject of food.

Safe Driving

Driving A Motor Car Is A Business

That Needs Attention

The man who is driving an automobile has a ton and a half of steel rolling along the highway. He may have the best intentions in the world, but if for any reason at all it gets out of his control, somebody is going to get hurt.

He may be guilty of nothing more heinous than dozing for five seconds but the effect can be as bad as if he were a homicidal maniac with a meat axe. And the only rule that can be laid down is that he has no business getting behind the wheel if anything is going to interfere with his ability to drive his car safely.

It has taken us a long time to learn this lesson, but it is soaking in slowly and when we get it digested we may be able to go on from there and realize that the same sort of truth applies to all of our activities in the modern world—Calgary Alberta.

Produce Figures As Proof

Canada, Not Australia's, Leads Empire In Passenger Travel By Air

Figures obtained at the Trans-Canada Air Lines office in Montreal refute the claim made by Australia that the Commonwealth leads the Empire in passenger travel by air.

Asked comment on the statement, T.C.A. executive pointed to the latest figures of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. In 1936 paying passengers on Canadian airlines totalled 90,421. In 1937 the number had grown to 114,472. Australia leads the record with 88,000 passengers on the year ending July 3, 1938. With the inauguration of regular passenger service by the T.C.A. this year between Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Lethbridge and Vancouver, the Canadian air travel figures will go up still higher.
